Overview :

- Many health problems faced by the society are multifactorial and often require social and political inputs as well as interventions from medical and technological experts.
- Creativity can help break down the artificial barriers that we have in medicine.
- We see medical specialties as being very different and very disconnected from each other and they are largely driven by diseases.
- This leads to the idea that different parts of the body and different diseases are all disconnected.
- This conference will act as a bridge for Interdisciplinary / Multidisciplinary approach which involves deep and robust integration of distinct disciplines of Health Sciences and Technology and encourage younger minds towards Research and Innovation and to improve patient outcomes.
